Start with self, then parents, then grandparents. Names: Surname in capital letters. First and middle names, not nicknames. For women, always use maiden names. Dates written day of month, month, four digit year. Locations: smallest to largest, including country. Write in pencil.

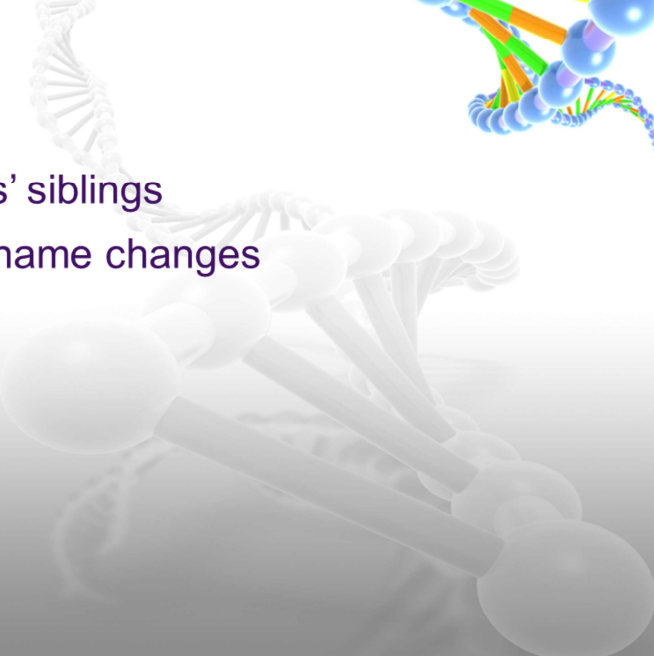

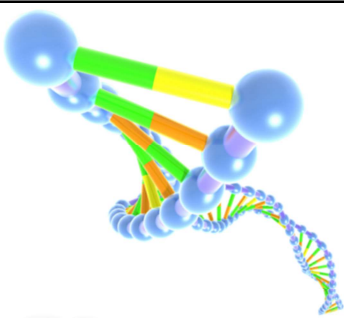

Computer file names - do the dates in reverse – 4-digit year, then month by number, then day. This allows you to sort records chronologically.

Home Sources

Questions to ask relatives

- Ask about:
 - Parents' and grandparents' siblings
 - Maiden names and other name changes
 - Military service
 - Places lived
 - Job history
 - Schools attended

Every bit of knowledge helps. Does the family have its own burial plot somewhere? Does your aunt keep all the cards & announcements she gets at family events in a box somewhere? Does someone in the family do scrapbooks?

Home Sources

Records to look for

- Letters, guest books, address books
- Family Bible
- Diaries, calendars
- Photos, trophies, jewelry
- Yearbooks, diplomas
- Birth, marriage, death certificates

Saved newspaper articles, funeral cards, confirmation & graduation cards & invitations, birth announcements – talk to the family hoarders.

Internet Search

Popular, Reliable Databases

- Ancestry.com – Full access inside the library or pay for a subscription
- Heritage Quest Online (via Library website) www.billingslibrary.org
- Family Search – <http://familysearch.org>
- FindMyPast.com (paid site/some free) - <http://www.findmypast.com>

Begin your research by conducting general searches

Rely on retrieved documents, not on other family trees

Record findings and save the results

Ancestry – Full Free access while inside the library – Select a level of access based on your needs - $20- $45/month

Heritage Quest – Lots of Census records and also the blank forms for each decade

Family Search – LDS has the most records of anybody anywhere

Find My Past – 14-day free trial - $20 month; also has some free records & info

Irish Government websites

- Irish National Archives
<http://nationalarchives.ie>
<http://www.nationalarchives.ie/genealogy1/introduction-to-genealogy/>
- National Library of Ireland
<http://www.nli.ie>
<http://www.nli.ie/en/family-history-introduction.aspx>
- Public Record Office of Northern Ireland (PRONI)
<https://www.nidirect.gov.uk/proni>

Sites all have instructions. Look for "Getting Started" or "Start Here" buttons

Both the Republic of Ireland & Northern Ireland have official records to research

Be patient & persistent – take lots of notes about each site

Informative introductions included for how to get started

Irish National Archives – Read the sections under “Genealogy” – Getting Started – Notice the input information that is suggested. You may be able to retrieve some from the U.S. census records

Census hierarchy:

County

District Electoral Division

Townland or Street

Household

Each household has census records about religious denominations, classification of buildings and outside buildings

National Library of Ireland – The introduction (Getting Started) page gives tips – BEGIN WITH CENSUS AND CIVIL RECORDS - and a link to their Genealogy Advisory Service. The Genealogy Advisory Service page lists some subscription websites that are available free if you are at the NLI. The list should help inform you that the NLI thinks these resources are important. Click on “Irish Ancestors” to enter a last name and find a map. “Other resources” include family histories and photographs. See FAMILY HISTORY > LINKS to see many informative links. Click on SERVICES to see a link to the REFERENCE ENQUIRY SERVICE. Their librarians will give advice but not do the research for you. Interesting locator tool: Click on GENEALOGY – GENEALOGY WEBSITES and then Boston Pilot newspaper’s “Missing Friends” advertisement for Irish.

PRONI – Your Research – Information Leaflets – Your Family Tree Series – 28 leaflets (pdf files) that help you navigate Irish records

Church and Civil Records

- Catholic Church records
<http://www.rootsireland.ie/>
- Civil & Church records
<https://www.irishgenealogy.ie/en/>
- Glossary of location terms: Townland – County – Civil Parish – Church Parish – Poor Law Union – Barony – Diocese – Province

Don't give up if one record search doesn't help.

Remember that if you want hardcopy, you'll probably have to pay for it.

Sometimes you have to go low-tech – the LDS Family History Center may have the microfilm you need SLC Gen library not sending microfilms out any more – in digitization process. You might have to go there to get access to the microfilm until the records go online.

ROOTSIRELAND.ie is a paid site, but the HELP pages are very informative and are free. Click HELP and CHURCH RECORDS. Then use the information on other websites or pay for a subscription to ROOTSIRELAND

Also find church records on IRISHGENEALOGY.IE/EN/ - Click CHURCH RECORDS – Search – Select the person – View the church register page.

Once you know WHERE your ancestor came from, you can find out more.

Griffith's has limitations – NOT a census – still very useful.

Keep doing cross-checks-verification,
additional info,
and new info.

Griffiths: Look for a surname in a county – also read all about the survey – it's NOT a census

- Court and Prison records – Petty sessions (Magistrates) – criminal and civil records

https://familysearch.org/wiki/en/Ireland_Court_Records

Ireland is known as one of the most litigious countries in the world.

Some records date back to the 1700's.

Lots of good info
in court records;
not all people
went to prison

Family Search: The index of court records may only be available while at the LDS Family History Center – 1711 6th Street West

Record your work:

Tools:

- Software
 - Family Tree Maker
 - Legacy Family Tree
 - Word, other document programs
- Hard Copies
 - Binder
 - File Folders
 - Index Cards
 - Notebook
- Online Databases
 - Ancestry.com
 - FindMyPast.com
 - FamilySearch.org

Find genealogy software or method that works for you.

Keep notes with your work about what you need to do next and questions.

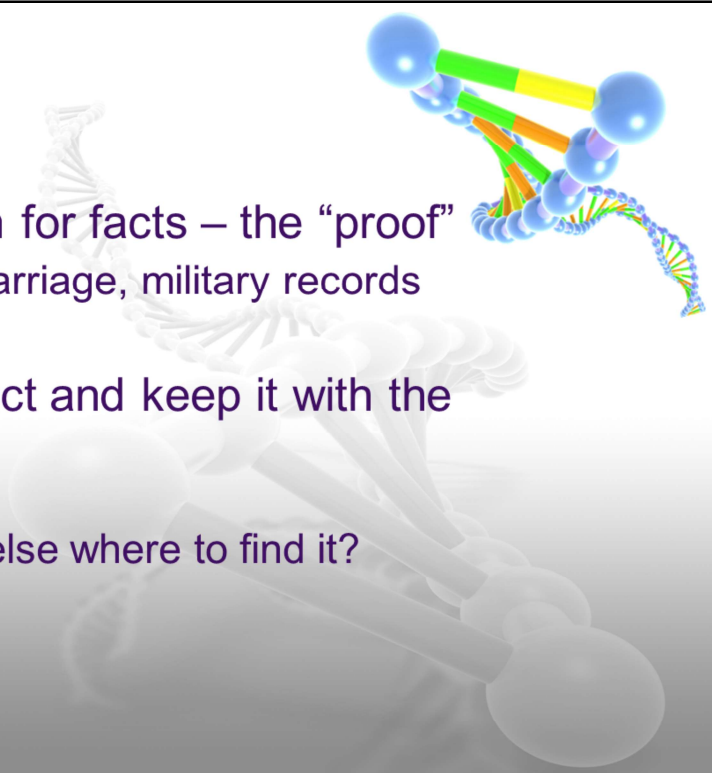

Organize your files in a way that you understand.

Use what you find easiest. If you put it in a computer, it's easier to pass around to other members of the family.

Record your work

Best Practices

- Save the documentation for facts – the “proof”
Census records, birth, marriage, military records
 - Cite the source of the fact and keep it with the documentation
Where did you find it?
Could you tell someone else where to find it?

Give images dated, informative filenames (for example, 1897-10-02 William Smith cart de visite), then tag the image also.

Record your work

Best Practices

- Record the facts on the record of the person they are about
- If possible, connect the document and citation to the person
- Record all questions and discrepancies for later
- Make backup copies

Remember that websites can change and disappear; keep ALL your documentation/pictures/whatnot backed up on a local/personal source.

Have an external drive for backups you can keep off site just in case.

Keep hardcopies somewhere safe also – fireproof box or cabinet.

Many, many other links

Other helpful sites

- The Internet Archive: www.archive.org
- Google – sometimes you hit the jackpot www.google.com
- Google Books also has good stuff, but you may have to buy the ebook/hardcopy if you have a lot of info in a particular book

Determine if you want to pay or not.

All the links are useful – keep looking till you find your fit.

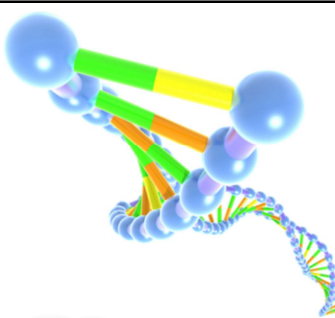

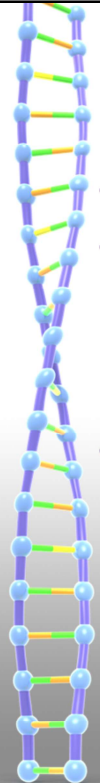

There are endless sites on genealogy on the web. Pick and choose carefully for best results.

Books that are old/out of copyright, look at the Archive – you can download entire books for free.

Just Google names you are looking for and see what comes up.

Google Books – you can do limited searches but may not get all you need without purchasing.

Famine Immigrants on GoogleBooks.

Many, many other links 2

Other helpful sites

- Evaluate each site carefully
- Look for supporting documentation
 - Any website is only a beginning
 - Once you find the website sources, you can request hard copy, downloads, etc.
- Have as much info to start with as possible – dates, names, places

Remember there are a lot of people named
John Smith.

Pick the right lineage – your John Smith.

Get the documentation that proves he is the correct John Smith.

If you can download, get the entire document/book/census record to look at in more depth later.

Extract/copy parts pertaining to individuals in your family and attach them to that family member's computer record.
