

Go for a walk and look for animals tracks in the snow! Can you find rabbit prints? Squirrels? Deer? Discover what's in your backyard! Not sure? Take pictures of the animal tracks and look them up together later.

Now it's time to make your own tracks in the snow.
What does your tracks say about you?

Brainstorm a list of good things about snow and bad things about snow and then choose one of the items on either list and write a story about it.

Put some black paper in the freezer, then when it snows, catch snowflakes on the paper and observe them with a magnifying glass.

Choose an animal you saw in the story and design their under-the-snow home. Use clues from the pictures and the information on the previous Story Trail display.
